President Roosevelt to-day granted a special hearing to a number of New York men who made a protest against the recommendations of Commissioner of Immigration Williams involving certain dealings from July 1 next. with immigrants. The interview with the President was sought in order that the facts in connection with the recent letting of contracts for the feeding of immigrants, the changing of their money and for their transportation might be known. The conference lasted an hour, at the conclusion of which it was announced that Secretary Shaw remained firm in his position of accepting Mr. Williams's recommendations. Later he awarded privilege contracts at the Ellis island immigrant station for three years as follows: Transportation of baggage, the Westcott Express Company; feeding immigrants and keeping a restaurant, Hudgins & Dumas; exchanging immigrants' foreign money, Post & Flagg, all of New York city. The New Yorkers will further protest.

Action Precipitated by the Attempted Suicide of Its Cashier.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 20 .- Anthony S. Sherman, cashier of the Merchants' Bank of this city, shot himself in the head last night. It is believed the wound is mortal. To-day, the bank, which is a private institution, was closed, this action having been precipitated by the attempted suicide of the cashier. The bank is an old state institution, having been chartered in 1817, and is a small one, though a few years ago it did a flourishing business with summer residents. It is learned from City Solicitor Burdick that he was called upon by Cashier Sherman, of the Merchants' Bank, two days ago for advice, and, acting under directions from the cashier, drew up a petition to Governor Kimball asking for a commission to examine into the affairs of the bank. Mr. Burdick states that when he forwarded the petition he had no idea that the bank's affairs were in such condition as he is now led to suppose them to be, which, in his words, is "very bad." He has had no opportunity to make any examination of the accounts, and his information was secured from Mr. Sherman in a professional way.

JOHN IRELAND WAS CHAPLAIN. Reunion of Survivors of the Old First Regiment of Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, June 20 .- The old First Minnesota Regiment, which was one of the first to respond to Lincoln's call for volunteers and which made the famous charge on the second day at Gettysburg, celebrated its forty-first anniversary to-day. One hundred and thirteen survivors participated. The reunion was made possible by a gift of $1,000 from J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway, and the entertainment of the veterans included a luncheon at the Hill residence, which was presided over by Mrs. Hill.

A pretty ceremony was the trooping of the colors at the state Capitol. All of the old battle flags, both those carried by the regiment and those it captured, were displayed to the veterans and their friends by young ladies, descendants of the veterans themselves. The luncheon at the Hill house was attended by ex-Governor Alexander Ramsey, the only surviving war Governor, and by Archbishop John Ireland, a former chaplain of the regiment.

ROTTEN AND INEFFICIENT

BRITISH ADMIRALTY SYSTEM DE-NOUNCED BY LORD BERESFORD.

Scathing Arraignment in the Commens of Alleged Incompetents-

Mr. Arnold-Forster's Reply.

LONDON, June 20 .- During the discussion of the navy estimates in the House of Commons to-day Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, Conservative, scathingly criticised the deficiency of the navy. He declared the whole Admiralty system was rotten and led to great extravagance nent members of the class, appropriate to and that there was a general want of efficiency in the navy, on which depended the existence of the empire. This was the judgment of all the commissions of inquiry and had been proven a fact. Every increase in the number of ships and every improvement in them had been the result of outside agitation. As the result of such agitation the British Mediterranean fleet was now a fourth stronger than a year

> It was remarkable, Lord Beresford added, that both army and navy officers were compelled to threaten to resign in order to get things righted. Great Britain had only 20,000 naval reserves instead of the requisite 80,000 and the engine-room departments were thousands of men short. As to armament, both the United States and France possessed superior guns. Blunders would continue until a separate business board was appointed at the Admiralty and was made responsible for the efficiency of the fleet. Treasury control was fatal to efficiency. As an instance the speaker pointed out the case of Sir Vernon-Harcourt, who, when chancellor of the exchequer, put his pen through the ammunition supplies after the guns had > been ordered. The secretary of the Admiralty, Mr. Arnold-Forster, in a general reply to the criticisms of the navy, denied that the Admiralty had been influenced by Lord Beresford's threats to resign. The navy. he added, had been steadily improving. but there was still room for the reinforcement and intellectual equipment of the system, which directs or ought to direct the forces of the empire.

DRINKS IN THE CAPITOL.

The Hole in the Wall and Committee Room Sideboards of Years Ago. Chicago Tribune.

Now that some of the followers of the water wagons in the House and Senate are threatening to abolish the sale of liquor from the restaurants of the great building on the hill, and the Washington authorities have imposed fines of $300 each on the keeper of the House and Senate restaurants, it is interesting to look back and see how the liquid refreshment were dispensed in the days gone by

When Webster, Calhoun and other legislative giants wanted to wet their whistle when engaged in making and unmaking laws for their country, they visited what was known as the "Hole in the Wall," a small room not far removed from the postoffice of the Senate, which at that time occupied the present Supreme Court chamber. This small circular room, which got the name of the "Hole in the Wall," was likewise the first restaurant the upper house ever knew, and as may well be imagined, the menu was not to be compared to that of the present-day restaurant, the great statesmen being satisfied with a sandwich of cold beef, tongue, ham, turkey, or a few hard-boiled eggs.

While the "feed" was slow, the fluid was plentiful and of the best, adultered and blended whiskeys not being tolerated. The liquor was good, and as a rule the big men took big drinks. The "Hole in the Wall" was for the convenience of senators and members and it was seldom that the ordinary citizen managed to get a chance to let the place know his presence. Of course, the statesmen were permitted to take their friends in for a friendly bumper, but the proprietor generally turned them out when not accompanied by a senator or Representative. To some extent the "Hole in the Wall" was a blind tiger and the proprietor was afraid of being "pulled." When the new Senate wing of the Capitol was finished provision was made in its basement for the present restaurant and postoffice. Later on the library absorbed the "Hole in the Wall," but to-day the little circular room remains as a reminder of legislative convivialities of the days long

When the "Hole in the Wall" disappeared there sprang up the sideboard adjunct for the committee rooms, and these flourished with a high hand for many years, and, in truth, some of these wet goods arrangements still hold good in a few of the rooms of the have-all-he-wants senators. These sideboard arrangements were fearfully abused by many who were permitted to visit the rooms, and finally they were regarded as a nuisance. And, too, some of the papers throughout the country began to make a protest at the large sums annually set forth by the secretary of the Senate as having been expended for 'snuff, quinine, bear's oil, pills, etc.," but which, in fact, went to the genuine old Indian fighter. The committee room bar was anything but a success, and gave the senators a vast amount of annoyance from the fellows who were ever ready to pan-handle a little liquid refreshments. It was in 1866 that Henry Wilson introduced a resolution in Congress abolishing the sale of whisky in the building. The tive, and from that day to the present it has not been difficult for a drink hunter to get all he wanted, although at intervals it has been announced that the sale of liquor had ceased.

"Resorts" Not Typical.

Philadelphia Press. How difficult it is for foreign observers to hit off the facts of American life accurately is shown in that a recent article, entitled "Impressions of America," in the London Mail, by Gilbert Parker, speaks of life at Aiken, S. C., as typically Southern. Of course, as every one knows, Aiken represents in the season a bit of the North transplanted in the South. Like so many other winter resorts in the South, Aiken has a cosmopolitan life that is about as untypical of the South as anything can well be. It is neither the "new" nor the "old South," but an artificial community of wealthy idlers, who seek there the openair life denied them in less clement climes, and who do not care for the more relaxing warmth of the Florida resorts. It is true, the "old South" in the country round about Aiken is not very far away and is typical enough, and if Mr. Gilbert Parker is referring to this phase of the Aiken life he is safe, but as written his words easily mislead. Resort life anywhere in the North or South, in California or in Canada, is not typical of the region in which the "resort" exists, and it is never safe to use it to point a lesson as to local characteristics. Kansas Farmers Want Help.
